

Someday

This Doesn't Exist

Seahorse Recordings

Someday Release Debut LP 'This Doesn't Exist' via Seahorse Recordings

FOR FANS OF: Early Tokyo Police Club and Foals, soft side of Sonic Youth, Bombay Bicycle Club, Placebo, Born Ruffians, Hot Hot Heat, The Stills
INFLUENCED BY: Sparklehorse, The Smiths, Joy Division, Placebo, Sonic Youth, The Cure
LEAD TRACKS: Last Lesson, Shelters, Forgotten, Maurizio, Jokes, Picture

FOR SHARING

Last Lesson Video <https://youtu.be/Eb5dgTeZMBE>

Bandcamp <https://someday.bandcamp.com/album/this-doesnt-exist>

Soundcloud <https://soundcloud.com/somedaymusic/sets/this-doesnt-exist>

"A conceptual and musical journey. Engrossing and intriguing from beginning to end... a bit of a roller coaster taking in the oppressive post punk of Joy Division, the playfulness of The Smiths, and the noise experiments of Sonic Youth" - Overblown Magazine

"Music that - despite being gaunt and haunting, melancholic and nocturne - always conveys electrical discharges of shimmering rock and pop melody" – Impatto Sonoro

"Mixing new wave, towards an almost dark atmosphere, and grunge... really explosive, raw but clean at the same time" – Aretusea Magazine

"Their songs are melancholic and nervous, ready to explode and then give up in silence. A very personal style of conceiving music" – UDS Magazine

"Melodic intensity... very catchy and pleasant with brilliant and expressive passages, developing a massive and intelligent work... sweet and sour, inspired and raw, but always true" – SulPaco blog

Seahorse Recordings presents the new 10-track album from Someday, called 'This Doesn't Exist'. Now based in Turin (Torino), this trio is comprised of Daniele Bianco, Michele Fierro, and Fabio Digitali. The first single from this album is 'Last Lesson', the video for which was directed by Nicolo Roccatello.

This is Someday's debut album, entailing a search for balance and essentialness that may be appreciated by fans of early Tokyo Police Club and Foals, Bombay Bicycle Club, Placebo, Born Ruffians, Hot Hot Heat, and The Stills. The band cite numerous influences, including early Sparklehorse, The Smiths, Joy Division, Placebo, Sonic Youth, The Cure, Paolo Conte and La Crus.

"Our song 'Last Lesson' was inspired by a true story happened some years ago, a very common and sad story. What happened made me think that, sometimes, when "something strange embraces you" and you think you are helpless, you just have to wait, nothing else... because maybe the solution is simple but you can't just see it," says Daniele Bianco. "'As usually happens with bands, the first album is a both a starting point and a goal... I hope it's only the beginning because we have a lot of other stories to tell, and some of them are ready for the telling."

"'Last Lesson' came about naturally, as it often happens when music works well... we play, we look in each other's eyes and we know immediately that the song just works. It sounds sweet and disturbing... like the feelings we often feel," explains Michele Fierro. "We are very happy because it is like we always wanted it to. Every song has its particular feeling and it sounds like we imagined. We can't wait to play it live."

Aptly titled 'This Doesn't Exist', the lyrics from this album speak about what no longer exists, never existed and will never exist. Lead tracks 'Last Lesson' and 'Clean Couch' are about people or animals that have gone to a better place. 'Little Choices' cites that we have no more achievable choices. 'Shelters and Picture' note places that are no longer reachable. 'Jokes' explores imaginary lives built on a lie, while 'Maurizio' tells of lives that have lost something very important. 'Forgotten' reveals certainties that are nothing but obvious illusions.

Through this album, the band highlight the trivial occurrences of ordinary lives, with shifting musical trajectories between dark and post-rock (Forgotten, Waitings, Little Choices) to indie pop (Clean Couch, Shelters, Picture), as well as new wave and light psychedelia (Last Lesson, Gliding, Jokes). 'This Doesn't Exist' is full of black and white atmospheres but celebrates the many shades of grey in between.

Someday was formed in Collegno, a city close to Torino (Piedmont, Italy) by two childhood friends – Daniel Bianco (guitar/vocals/lyrics) and Michele Fierro (bass). Initially rehearsing in Michele's living room and Daniel's cellar, they began making demo tapes, had several singles on Italian music compilations, and eventually released their debut EP "Flowers in the Cellar" and two singles 'Divano Pulito' and 'Rifugi' in 2016, produced by Luca "Vicio" Vicini of Subsonica. They were then joined by drummer Federico Segato to form a trio, who was subsequently replaced by Fabio Digitali.

'This Doesn't Exist' is now available digitally via key digital music platforms and on Someday's Bandcamp, as well as on CD with distribution via Audioglobe.

TRACK LIST

1. Clean Couch 03:54
2. Forgotten 03:05
3. Last Lesson 03:40
4. Shelters 02:58
5. Waitings 03:39
6. Picture 04:10
7. Maurizio (Little Star) 02:53
8. Little Choices 04:59
9. Jokes 04:53
10. Gliding 04:11

CREDITS

Music by Daniele Bianco and Michele Fierro, lyrics by Daniele Bianco
Daniele Bianco: vocals, electric guitars, glockenspiel
Michele Fierro: bass

Federico Segato: drums
Additional guitars and synthesizer: Paolo Messere
Recorded and mixed at Eye & Ear Studio (Fiumedinisi, Messina) on July 17-31, 2016.
Produced and mixed by Paolo Messere, assisted by Giuseppe Barbera
Mastered by Paolo Messere
Cover artwork by Simone Valentino
Video directed by Nicolò Roccatello

LYRICS - LAST LESSON

Very sad to realize two and two is five,
and even worse to get it on a rainy monday morning.
Bad old coffee and useless shoes, no one else at home,
a couple of memories, a boring ghost and nothing out there.

I'm so sorry you grabbed something,
something that I only glimpsed
some old silent sunny days
when there was no one else at home.

If only you had made four more steps you'd have seen the showcase and now you would drink cold orange juice on a sunny beach somewhere in the world or maybe six more steps and now you would drink a free beer in my corner.

I'm so sorry you grabbed something,
something that I only glimpsed
some old silent sunny days
when there was no one else at home.

Anyway I always take the other road because there's still something strange that embraced you and only barely touches me sometimes.

Keep up with Someday

<https://www.facebook.com/somedaytorino>

<https://someday.bandcamp.com/releases>

<https://twitter.com/somedaytorino>

<https://soundcloud.com/somedaymusic>

<https://www.instagram.com/somedaytorino/>

https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCV\_7mHdPn5FT-IHasZluHVA

If you have any questions, contact Shauna from Shameless Promotion PR at contact@shamelesspromotionpr.com.